

No description. # Write an introduction to a fictional blog post titled "Room 5 Gets a New Teacher". If you thought your teacher was strict, wait until you get a load of this! Starting Monday, Room 5 will have a new teacher. We don't know anything about them yet- not their name or what they look like. They're arriving from Europe and won't speak English. It's unclear what the new teacher is going to do with us for the entire year, but we have our guesses: some think that they'll just observe while we go on with life as usual while some think that the new teacher is going to teach us something different from all of our other teachers here at Room 5. I'm excited to see our new teacher. # Write an interview between a young child and his dad in which the child asks his dad how he became a fireman when he was young. The father tells about where he grew up, what school he went to, when and why he decided to become a fireman, etc. You are free to make up details that are helpful in the story. Dad: Whenever I was younger, I had always wanted to be a firefighter just like my mom's brothers and uncles. When I was six years old, we moved from Iowa into our new house here in Wisconsin and I finally got used to it after almost three months of living here. My dad had been a fireman in Iowa and he had always told me stories about his adventures while he was a fireman. I really wanted to be a fireman, too. I used to watch my dad do all of the work that was needed by firefighters and that has inspired me to be a firefighter when I grow up. Child: Wow, look at your big truck! How old is it? Is it an old truck? Can you get any of your tools from the truck? Dad: You have no idea how much this truck means to me. It is a 1991 Ford F-150. It is my first truck and I have been working on it since I was a teenager. My dad got rid of a lot of his stuff before he moved to Wisconsin, but I kept that old truck. It has about half of all of my dad's tools in it and there is still enough room for me to get everything that I need from it. Child: Did you grow up near where your dad used to be a fireman? Dad: Well, when my dad was still in Iowa we moved to Wisconsin and we lived here for about three years. I moved back to Iowa over the summer so we could sell the house and move forward with our life here in Wisconsin.
